AMERICAN MILLIONAIRE'S WEDDING YESTERDAY.

Very quietly, by special licence, without music or decoration, Mr. Marshall Field, the proprietor of the enormous Marshall Field stores in Chicago, was married to Mrs. Caton, an American lady, at St. Margaret's, Westminster, yesterday. The photograph shows Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Field leaving the church after the ceremony, while on the left is an excellent snapshot, the first taken since he arrived in England, of Mr. Whitelaw Reid, the American Ambassador, who was one of the few guests.

FRANCE'S ULTIMATUM TO MOROCCO EXPIRED YESTERDAY.

The strained relations between France and Morocco, brought about by the arrest of a French subject and the refusal of the Sultan either to apologise or pay an indemnity or punish the Kaid responsible for it, reached a critical stage yesterday. The French Government delivered an ultimatum, and ordered its Minister at Fez to prepare to leave the city. The photograph on the left shows the Sultan, Abdul Asiz, the third figure on the left, in consultation with Kaid Sir Harry McLean and two other officials, while that on the right shows a review of Moorish troops, which are now being rapidly mobilised.—(Avery.)

IWASBALD

This announcement is of special interest to every man and woman who has previously tried other hair growing preparations. If you have had no success with others, please write to me. I refrain from expressing any personal opinion as to other preparations, but point to the vast array of letters received from patrons who, having tested numerous advertised compounds, washes, etc., without benefit, used my pomade, and found it to be exactly as represented-a true hair grower! It is always prepared in accordance with the formula with which my name has become famous, and which is endorsed by noted analytical experts of England, Germany, France, and the United States. It can be shown by many letters which I receive that, in a few days after the first application, the hair begins to grow and continues until a healthy, strong, permanent growth is manifest.

Great Distribution of Large Trial Boxes.

My offer is a straightforward, honest proposition from a business man to sensible men and women. The merit of my True Hair Grower is in the preparation itself—not in the advertising. If you will write to me, I will send you a Large Trial Box of the John Craven-Burleigh True Hair Grower for Sixpence only. I make this offer because I want you to know just what my True Hair Grower will do. I was bald; it cured me, and it has cured thousands of others. Package will be sent securely sealed in plain wrapper.

MOORISH SULTAN DEFIES FRANCE. Pathetic Story of an Unhappy

Disregards the Ultimatum Which Expires To-day.

READY TO STRIKE.

France Will Take Up Arms in Default of Reparation.

This is an anxious day in the Chancelleries of Europe. Unless the Sultan of Morocco makes amends to France within a few hours, a French expedition may invade his territory, and French warships may shell Tangier and the other coast

The situation is so serious that it has completely diverted attention from the Far East of bustling modern activity to the Near East of the Mosque, the Seraglio, and Oriental sloth.

The matter stands thus. A few weeks ago the Sultan's troops captured a French Algerian subject named Bumzian, and cast him into prison. France, naturally, resented this outrageous act; she demanded the release of her subject, and the payment of an indemnity.

With the usual Oriental evasiveness, the Sultan played with the question until France's patience was exhausted, and an ultimatum was presented.

INADEQUATE REPARATION.

Last week the Moorish authorities released Bumzian, but in doing so sent a long communica tion to the French Legation disputing the French claim to jurisdiction over Algerians settled in Morocco. They declared that they released the prisoner as an act of courtesy towards a friendly nation, and suggested that the principle at issue nation, and suggested that the principle at issue should be referred for discussion to the forthcoming conference on Morocco.

It was, in short, an entirely inadequate answer. There was no apology, no offer of complete repara-tion. A great European Power could not possibly accept such a compromise, and France's only reply was a fresh ultimatum, demanding the payment of 28,000 and an analogy. was a fresh ultimatum, demanding the payment of £6,000 and an apology.

The ultimatum expires to-day. If Morocco does not—

(1.) Apologise for the arrest;(2.) Punish the Governor responsible; and(3.) Pay the indemnity, the French Minister will leave Fez, and a military demonstration will probably follow on the Algerian frontier. At the same time French cruisers will leave for Tangier and Mogador.

THE KAISER'S INFLUENCE.

THE KAISER'S INFLUENCE.

Such is the situation on the surface. If the secret history of the incident could be written it would be doubtless found that the strange obstinacy of the Sultan is due, not to fanaticism, but to the workings of German influence. Before the Kaiser went to Morocco the Sultan had a whole-some dread of France, but after the Kaiser had put his ever-restless finger into the Moorish pie the potentate of Fez imagined that he was at liberty to flout France with impumity.

He has followed up the cue with clumsy eagerness, and the Kaiser's pinprick to France may develop into a very great European question. The Paris Government is apparently determined not to let itself be flouted by a half-civilised Power; Great Britain is wholly in sympathy with her; and the Kaiser has either to place himself in a dangerous position, or allow his protégé to reap the reward of his folly.

It is, of course, possible that the Sultan may retreat at the last poment. If he does not the

It is, of course, possible that the Sultan may retreat at the last moment. If he does not, the situation is fraught with great and unpleasant possi-bilities.

GIRL-QUEEN'S MISERY CHIVALROUS CARE OF PEACE TREATY TEXT.

SHATTERED IDEALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

THE HAGUE, Tuesday.—Tragedy has cast its red mantle over many European thrones in various guises, but surely, with the exception of the Hapsburg dynasty, no greater depth of pathos can be shown than in the life of the unhappy young Queen who rules over the Netherlands.

Only four and a half years ago, when she wedded, by her own choice, Duke Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Queen Wilhelmina, looking forward from the threshold of her married life, was the picture of sweetness and youth.

Alas, for the vanity of human hopes! The Prince Consort was heavily in debt on his marriage, the moneylenders were veritable Shylocks, and the little Queen found herself compelled, out of her own private purse, to help him redeem his fallen fortunes, for the Dutch Parliament was charac-teristically recommenders.

fortunes, for the Dutch Parliament was characteristically parsimonious.

That was the first cloud that marred the marital horizon, and it also served to enhance the German princelet's unpopularity in Holland.

MORE EMBITTERED.

Duke Henry does not get a single guilder by way of allowance from his adopted country. Should the Queen predecease him and leave issue he will get 100,000 guilder a year for the rest of his life; should she die childless he will be practically a snould she die childless he will be practically a pauper.

And so came the second rift in the lute. The hopes of an heir to the throne have been more than once dashed to the ground.

The Prince Consort's naturally "dour" disposition became more and more embittered by his disappointments, and the domestic misery of the unhappily-matched couple culminated three years ago in a terrible quarrel that for a time became the world-scandal of Europe.

It was patched up, only to send-the Queen to a bed of sickness, where for weeks her life was despaired of.

To-day Wilhelmina is but the shadow of her former self. Her brief twenty-five years of life have apparently contained forty.

Bowed with sorrow and shattered ideals, and broken in health, her once happy countenance careworn and weary, the brilliance of her glance dimmed by hopeless longing for the unattainable, the little Queen has earned the ungrudging pity of all.

COVERING A BROKEN HEART.

Her people's love can never be alienated, but the grim palace in Amsterdam and the pretty chateau at Loo cover the broken heart of their young mistress. The fierce light that beats upon thrones casts correspondingly deep shadows, but nowhere are they darker than over the prematurely old girl-Queen whom fate has drawn from her happy maidenhood to rule over the destinies of the Nether-

WOMAN'S HONOUR.

Student Goes to Prison Rather Than Compromise Millionaire's Wife.

The romance of a young man who has endured two years' imprisonment in the Sing-Sing Prison, New York, is about to come before the American courts on the plea that he should be at once pardoned.

It was about two years ago that this young man, of high social position, came to New York from the West to visit several of his old classmates.

At a dance he met a beautiful matron, then about twenty-three years old. She was-married to a millionaire of prominent name, living in New York City, but operating factories in New Jersey. The woman and the young man were attracted to each other. He called to see her. Then there followed other meetings at her home when her husband was absent.

The husband was of a violently jealous disposition, and heard-rumours about his wife and the student.

One day he went to his factories and said he he reached his home his wife and the young man were together.

Faced with a horrible position, and eager to save the name of the woman he loved, the young man hid behind the curtains, and when discovered acted as a burglar, had a sharp struggle with the husband, and was arrested.

When charged, he said he had come to burgle the place and had terrorised the wife with a revolver. Under an assumed name he was tried, admitted burglary, and was imprisoned. Since then the wife's husband has died, and now she intends to spare no expense to secure his release by laying before the authorities the whole facts of the case.

Disinherited Daughter After All Receives £1,500,000 of Her Father's Estate.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PITTSBURG, Tuesday.—A great cause célèbre has been settled. The will of Mr. Lockhart, the millionaire Standard Oil magnate, will not be contested. His favourite daughter married Mr. Flower, the family dentist, and for that she was disinherited. Her father left a fortune variously estimated at £12,000,000 to £28,000,000, and she demanded £22,000,000 as her share. The matter has been before the courts, but now Mrs. Flower has accepted £1,500,000 as a compromise, with the stipulation that she will have no further claim on the estate.

Japan's Gain of All She Demanded Before the War.

DIVIDED SAGHALIEN.

While the whole world has been waiting for the signature of the treaty between Japan and Russia the text of that treaty, which the plenipotentiaries met to sign yesterday, has been published.

Although its publication is not official, there can be little doubt that the report sent by the correspondent of the "Matin" is substantially accurate. In effect, the text shows that Japan gains all that she asked for before the war commenced, although she asked for before the war commenced, although abandoning many of the demands she made at the opening of the peace negotiations.

In the chief articles of the treaty, the preponderating interests of Japan in Korea are recognised by Russia, the evacuation of Manchuria by the troops of both countries is assured, and the rights acquired by Russia over Port Arthur and Dalny are ceded to Japan.

Russia cedes to Japan the southern half of Saghalien as far as the fittieth parallel of north latitude with the towns therein situated.

Russia and Japan undertake to exchange their prisoners of war, each Power refunding to the other the actual cost of the maintenance of the prisoners. The ratification of the treaty is to be countersigned by the Sovereigns of the two States within fifty days after the signature of the treaty.

Linau, Monday.—The reservists called out here were marching to the station on Saturday evening when a large crowd blocked the road and broke through the accompanying regulars, calling upon the reservists not to leave.

The Cossacks were ordered to charge and dispersed the demonstrators. The soldiers opened fire on them, forcing an entrance into one of the houses, killed nine and wounded twenty-four persons. A policeman was killed and a soldier wounded. About 150 arrests were made.—Reuter.

The recent attempt on the part of the populace of the Azov district (says the St. Petersburg "Sveit") to lynch thieves that overrun the locality has led to a curious development.

Workmen have formed themselves into a society to act as informal police and to suppress the robbers by shooting them down. As these original sportsmen, however, occasionally fail to discriminate between known thieves and strangers, visitors to the neighbourhood are not having a happy time of it.

ECLIPSE AND

Astrologer Declares That the Two Are Intimately Connected.

SPREAD OF THE SCOURGE.

Last week's eclipse and the wave of cholera which is spreading eastward through Europe are believed by astrologers to have a most intimate connection

"An eclipse is always followed by a great calamity," said a well-known astrologer to the Daily Mirror yesterday. .

"This time the eclipse occurred while the sun was in the sign of Virgo, which is believed to govern the internal organs of the body. We therefore concluded long ago that an outbreak of cholera would accompany it.

"When the sun is eclipsed it means danger to all those places, persons, and parts of the body which are associated with that part of the Zodiac the sun occupies during its eclipse.

Places Likely To Be Affected.

"This eclipse is therefore thought to mean danger to the following places:—

Lyons.
Navarre.
Paris.
Reading.
Candia.
Croatia.
Greece.
Lower Silesia.

"I think the eclipse will affect the unemployed, too, for Virgo also rules labour and the working too, for Virgo also rules labour and the working classes."

Turning to other disasters which he asserted would in all probability follow this eclipse of the sun, the astrologer said:—

"The eclipse was expected to affect the destinies of the Queen of Holland, for whom divorce is predicted; the Crown Prince of Japan, whose country is blessed with news of peace; the late Speaker, whose wife was ill at the time of the eclipse; and the Tsar of Russia, whose life is believed to be in grave danger."

CHOLERA SPREADING.

Many Fatal Cases Reported from Various Towns in Prussia and Austria.

Reports from various districts show that cholera is spreading in the most alarming fashion on the Continent.

The official "Staatsanzeiger," of Berlin, stated yesterday that during the previous twenty-four hours eleven cases of cholera and one death were officially reported in the State of Prussia. This brings up the total to seventy-seven cases and twenty-four deaths.

Eleven cases have occurred among a battalion of soldiers near Dirschau, on the Vistula, and in the basin of the River Weichsel sixteen different places are affected. Twenty-two Government doctors have been sent to East Prussia to take charge of the sanitary arrangements.

Austria has also been invaded by the disease, and in the provinces of Galicia and Bukovina 200 deaths are already reported to have occurred.

Elaborate Precautions To Prevent Cholera Reaching This Country.

medical authorities of the Port of London are taking extraordinary measures to prevent the dread disease from creeping into this country.

The appearance of a vessel from the Baltic or North Sea at Gravesend is considered a danger signal. The medical officer at once puts out in a launch to board her.

A searching medical examination is then made of every person on board. A slight fever or irregularity in pulse is enough to arouse the suspicion of the vigilant officials.

If the vessel is found free from disease, those on board are allowed to land at London after their names and addresses have been given to the authorities. After that they are carefully watched by the local medical officers until the dangerous period of incustation passes.

A single trace of disease of any sort is enough to hurry the crew and passengers of to Denton, near Gravesend, where the infected persons are at once placed in the Port Sanitary Hospital.

CHOLERA. Feeble Comedy Produced at the Adelphi Last Night.

> Mr. Otho Stuart must imagine that playgoers fond of Shakespeare have very simple dramatic tastes in other directions. "Dr. Wake's Patient," the first modern piece he has produced at the Adelphi, is positively infantile. Cut down a bit, it would be an ideal entertainment for a penny reading or a Sunday-school treat.

reading or a Sunday-school treat.

The Lady Geranium—no, beg pardon, Gerania—daughter of the Earl of St. Olbin, is thrown from her horse in the country and attended to by a young doctor. Her haughty parents appearing on the scene and sweeping her off, she does not say goodbye to him or even discover his name. For months she pines for love of the unknown. Then her parents send her to see a famous nerve specialist. You guess who the specialist is? Not the young doctor? globe in the year 1905 A.D. two authors whose faith in the public appetite for coincidence is strong enough for that. Their names are Gayer Mackay and Robert Ord. Mr. Mackay palliates his offence by appearing in the piece and being quite finny. There is no extennating circumstance in the case of Mr. Ord.

After this they spin out two more acts by making the course of true love run not quite smoothly, but the play is, for the experienced playger, already over. It has no "side-shows." Striking Statistics.

After all, the trouble which is attending fruit-growers cannot be wondered at when the great disadvantages against which they have to fight are taken into consideration. The chief trouble is caused by the unfair and unreasonable rates charged by railway companies. One of the best instances of this is given in the Blue-book on the fruit industry published yester-day.

The rate for sending cherries 135 miles on the Great Western Railway is 30s. 3d. per ton—to send cherries 142 miles in France costs 8s. 1d.

During the last twenty years there has been an increase in acreage under fruit—Kent increasing from 16,384 to 27,620 acres.

But in Wales and in Scotland several counties show a large decrease.

In the Channel Islands there are to-day 578 less acres under fruit cultivation than in 1885.

Still the sightseers comforted themselves with the thought that there were both bridgeroom and bride to arrive. They could be seen from outside, and that was bound to be exciting.

But it was not. In fact, no one believed that the white-haired, military-looking man in the hotel carriage could be Mr. Field.

Mr. Field's son, who acted as best man, and his grand-children, who were also there, refrained from throwing rice. The bride, who was given away by her nephew, was dressed in a beautifully-embroidered grey crèpe de Chine dress. She carried a large bouquet, and wore some splendid iewels, presented by the bridegroom.

The creemony over, the bride and bridegroom had to run the gantlet of the sightseers at the doors. There was no mistaking the principals now, for they had to come out first. The hotel carriage drove up from where it had been waiting, ten yards away, very much at its ease. The millionaires hurried across the pavement, the American cameras clicked, and the excitement was over-what there was of it.

DOCTORS' PLAINT.

Growing Lack of Subjects for Dissection Bitterly Deplored.

SERIOUS OUTLOOK.

"Nobody to cut up," is the wail of London schools of anatomy.

The dearth of dead subjects for dissection is a serious problem at present confronting the medical faculty. This is due to the lessening of the number of unclaimed bodies without relatives or friends, and also to the fact that public sentiment is against the handing over of subjects to anatomists.

The demand is considerably in excess of the supply. During the last twelve months there was a shortage of more than 200 bodies—the demand being for 500, whereas less than 300 were available. The existing arrangements for the supply of the various hospitals and schools of anatomy in London is a pooling one, representatives from the various licensed demonstrators forming a committee which is responsible to the Home Department.

The strictest routine is observed, the subject, from the moment it leaves the infirmary to its final burial being treated with the greatest reverence.

What religious views the subject held when alive are ascertained, and the body is buried with suitable observances.

The question of expense in railway charges is also being raised, the medical profession being of opinion that the various companies should help a good work of this nature by a reduction of their present high charge of one shilling a mile.

At first Americans hesitated after yesterday's strength. People wanted to see which way the cat was going to jump after yesterday's New York Stock Exchange holiday. The jump was in the right direction, and Americans closed strong. Evidently the talk of the coal strike is disregarded, for the coal-carrying roads were better. This coal strike would be no bad thing for British collery interests, giving just that extra fillip that would be causing us all to talk of trade revival. And that is just what the markets want.

CHOLERA HEADING TOWARDS ENGLAND.

Cholera, the most dreaded scourge in the world, is on the increase in Prussia, and slowly the infected area is widening towards this country. The darkened portions of the map indicate the regions in which the plague is spreading. In view of the great trade between Hamburg, where two cases have been notified, and London, most elaborate precautions have been taken by the medical officers of health at Gravesend, and each vessel entering the river is subjected to the severest examination.

"MORE LABOUR M.P.s."

THIS is the principal cry at the Trade union Congress, which began in earnest at Hanley, vesterday. "The workers must be better represented in Parliament." It is a cry with which one may sympathise without feeling certain that the Trade Unions are going quite the right way to work. To begin with, have the Labour M.P.s who sit in the House of Commpns done all they might have done to justify their presence there? Compare their efforts with those of the earliest Socialist deputies in the German Parliament. The latter had far more steam. They attracted more attention. They were more desperately in earnest.

Many of us find it hard to discover what are the political principles of the Labour M.P.s. Are they clinging to the worn-out creed of Liberalism? Or are they Socialists? If so, what do they mean by Socialism, and what is their programme? Let them have the courage of their convictions and speak out boldly with united voice.

Another mistake they make lies in treating Progress as a purely working-man's duestion. They are narrow. They wear a bandage of class prejudice over their eyes. They do not see that in the middle-class there are thousands anxious for progress, far more anxious than the working-man, who is not yet intelligent enough in the lump to understand what a rut England has got into.

Without the middle-class labour will be able to do little or nothing for a generation to come. A united party of Progress and Common-Sense Reform might change the face of England in ten years. Until we form that party we shall get little benefit out of "more labour M.P.s."

H. H. F. Another mistake they make lies in treating

THE APPEAL TO REASON.

An American preacher who had been comparing President Roosevelt to the Founder of Christianity asked plaintively the other day why so much attention was paid to his sermon by the newspapers! He had apparently not noticed that nowadays it is the penalty of all public men, however unimportant, to find themselves reported whenever they have said experience at all out of the ordinary.

Roman Catholic priest at Preston on Betting. This courageous father took the sensible line that betting is not necessarily a sin. If it were free from deceit, and the chances were fairly even, and the money risked belonged to the person risking it, then there was nothing actually wrong in it.

At the same time the preacher strongly recommended his hearers not to have anything to do with a habit which led so frequently to crime and poverty, and had such a debasing influence-upon sport and games. Surely it is a better plan to appeal to people's reason, as this wise priest did, than to indulge in violent rhetoric about the wickedness of betting. If people can be convinced that it is stupid to bet, and that the consequences of it are likely to refrain than if they are told, however loudly, that it is sinful. Most men (and women, too) would rather commit a sinful act, if they thought they could gain by it, than a silly act which they knew would do them larm.

The less are workered of all sections betting in the street in the single part is a silly act which they knew would do them.

The best argument of all against betting is The best argument of all against betting is that you never find a man who has made it pay. Can anyone point to a fortune made by betting, which has not been lost as quickly as at was made? Betting is as sure a way of losing money as standing on the beach and throwing it into the sea.

The tide may return you a few of your coins, and in betting you may occasionally win back and in betting you may occasionally win back some of what you have lost, but the most of your money goes in each case, never to be seen by you again.

MORNING'S GOSSIP.

The news of Sir Wyndham Portal's illness has caused a good deal of anxiety amongst his friends, for he is now an old maneighty-three last July—and illness at that age is alway more o'r less serious. Sir Wyndham lost his wife two years ago. He married in 1849, and celebrated his golden wedding very happly in 1899 at his Hampshire place, Malshanger House. He is known all over Hampshire, and is a president or patron of countless friendly societies, charitable clubs, and other useful institutions throughout the county. Sir Wyndham's career has been a very interesting one. He began in the business of manufacturing banknote paper for the Bank of England.

Then he has been a director, deputy chairman, and HE news of Sir Wyndham Portal's illness

Then he has been a director, deputy chairman, and finally chairman of the South-Western Railway. He was rewarded for his management of the enormous traffic during the South African war by a baronetcy, which was bestowed upon him by the late Queen in 1901. Queen Victoria also sent him a present and a message of thanks "for the personal care and attention which he had devoted to her Majesty's comfort" when he retired from the chairmanth of the South-Western Railway in 1899. manship of the South-Western Railway in 1899.

Mrs. Starkie is a tall, fair, handsome woman, who dresses admirably. She made a most successful hostess in London this season when she gave a ball, in which she was assisted by Lady Gerard. Lord Royston, Mr. Joliffe, Lady Gwendoline Bertie, and several others are going to Huntroyde this week.

One of the most interesting weddings of the week is that between Captain H. M. Wilson, 10th Hussars, and Miss Barbara Lister, the eldest daughter of Lord and Lady Ribblesdule, which takes place on Thursday up in Yorkshre. Both the bridegroom and bride are remarkable for their good looks, Miss Lister being a strikingly hand-some girl. Perhaps there was another reason for the late Queen's appreciation of him. He was one of those who helped to make the great exhibition of 1851 a success, and that, in her Majesty's eyes, was a service worthy of reward.

The exhibition ** * *

The exhibition was suggested and organised by the Prince Consort, and "dear Albert," as the late Queen loved to call him, was very much attacked in certain newspapers for his idea. Tit was said that the exhibition would be a dead failure, that no-body wanted a glass palace in the middle of Hyde-Park, that it would end in national bankruptcy, and so on. The Prince paid no attention to these querulous criticisms, and calmly went on with his arrangements. As it turned out, the exhibition was an immense success, and his confidence was fully justified. The glass palace of Hyde Park is now the Crystal Palace, Sydenham. It is not altogether an entrancing object, and Mr. Max Beerbohm once remarked of it that it was a permanent danger to foreigners entering London by the line that passes it—they might put their heads out of the window and catch a sight of it without being prepared beforehand.

Lord Curron, whose coming of age is being celebrated this week at Gopsall, completed his twenty-first year, it may be remembered, on May Day last, but it was thought better that all festivities in connection with this interesting event should take place in the autumn, and at the present time there is a large party staying with Lord and Lady Howe at Gopsall in celebration of the event. That is a grotesque idea of the late Signor Tamagno's—to be buried in a glass coffin and exposed for ever to the curiosity of future generations in a tomb above ground. Really the notion that actors and singers suffer from the common failing of vanity would seem to be justified by this proceeding. Not satisfied with being gazed at by crowds of admirers during his lifetime, Tamagno secures, by the elaborate process of embalming, that he shall continue to be admired during the long fixity of death. The idea is worthy of Edgar Poe. Let us hope that, it will not serve as a precedent for others.

Perhaps one of the defects of the Italian character is a vanity which is not allogether displeasing. If has a certain naïveté, a simplicity, about it which these charming people give to all their virtues and vices. Sometimes amongst their women the love of admiration takes strange forms. One instance is that of a Venetian lady famous in Italian society for her extraordinary beauty. A few years ago, having arrived at the age when women have to watch the slow decay of their charms without the power to stop it, this woman gave a magnificent banquet, and appeared, for the last time, perfectly beautiful and young. Then she sent cards of fare-

Permit a brief reply to "P. E. S.'s" equivocal remark that but for Christianity science "would not stand where it does to-day."

I agree—it would probably be far ahead (vide Gibbon, Lecky, Draper, Dadson), for the early Christians, from Constantine onwards, did all they could to extipate it.

It was the dominant Christian power which burnt Bruno at the stake, and tortured Galileo for saying that the earth revolved, and I have met a modern Christian who would avowedly have done the same to Darwin had he possessed the power to do it. St. Sylvestre, Nice.

THE WITHAM RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

With reference to the accident at Witham which, I see, did not come at all as a surprise to the inhabitants of that town, owing to the fact that they had often seen the swaying of the train as it rushed down the incline, I should like to say that there is a similar yery dangerous place on the London, Tilbury, and Southend Railway line.

Just before the train enters Pitsea Junction it swings down a hill with tremendous force, and then swerves round a bend. I have frequently been then supported the seen of the seen of the seen of the seen seen the seen is the special to the seen of the seen seen the seen that it is the spint, and it seems quite half a minute before the train gains its equilibrium.

It is the opinion of a good many people who travel on this line that there will be one day an accident at this point.

FOOTBALL MANIACS.

This term, I think, is not an imaginary one. When one's peace (should one reside within half a mile of any big professional club) is disturbed for the best part of three-quarters of an hour by ten or twenty thousand people howling themselves hoarse to encourage twenty-two others to proceed with what may in many cases be called a hacking match, I venture to suggest that time is arriving for supporters of this game to use a little more self-control.

(4) As a child of eight I was at a boarding-school at Ramsgate, presided over by two maiden ladies, school at Ramsgate, presided over by two maiden ladies, where the same night seven of the youngest, including myself and a governess, heard the curtains surrounding our beds parted, and the curtains surrounding our beds parted, and the aunt looked at each one and smiled.

A friend of mine and myself she stooped and kissed also. I have never forgotten what I felt like when I heard she had died, and knew she must have done this after death.

(2) I went with my husband and two children to Southend for a fortnight, and came home last Monday. While there I dreamt we were back home, and that my eldest daughter had met with an accident. So vivid was my dream that I would hardly let her out of my sight.

She only laughed it off, but yesterday she went to the City on business for her father. I cautioned her before she went to be careful. And, sure enough, my dream came true in every detail.

She was crossing the road and slipped on her back with the legs on the roadway just as a large dray with two horses was passing.

She gave herself up for lost and fainted—When she came to herself she had been carried into a shop and a lady was attending to her.

She has told me not once but several times since that as she fell and saw the horses rearing over her my dream, as I had explained it to her, came back to her. It was an exact representation of what did happen, and she thought instantly, "Mother's dream! Shall I be killed?"

A CLERGYMAN DENOUNCES SPIRITUALISM

A CLERGYMAN DENOUNCES SPIRITUALISM.

Permit me, as a Christian minister, to say that I accept the fact of the supernatural which spiritualists claim, and also believe in their avowed sincerity. I wish respectfully to remind them that it is a fulfilment of a New Testament prophecy, which intimates that it is Satanic in its character, and that it leads away its votaries from the vital truths of religion, as may be seen in the words of St. Paul: "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils" (Greek: "Geachings of demons") (I. Tim. iv., I).

It is as clearly rebuked in the Old Testament, as in Isaiah vilii., 19, R.V.: "And when they shall say unto you: Seek unto them that have familiar spirits and into wizards that chirp and that mutter: Should not a people seek unto their God? On behalf of the living, should they seek unto the dead?"

Spiritualism, though supernatural, should be shunned as a sin and a peril.

THE SPIRIT AND THE DOOR.

This week an old lady died in Leamington. She had been a burden to the nurse and the girl whom she lived with for a long while. When the end came and the body laid out at night, the nurse said to the girl: "I feel so tired. We will shut the other room door."

No sooner had they done so than a voice said: "Don't shut me in." Upon the nurse going to the room where the corpse lay, she found "the door open," and that door could not be shut until a joiner came to adjust it. It would not come to by about three inches.

This is a proof we survive what we call death, as we do survive sleep in a dream with a body independent of the physical body.

MAN NOT IMMORTAL

MAN NOT IMMORTAL.

The very foundation of the belief of spiritualists is proved by the Bible to be a foundation of sand. Biblical teaching is that the soul, or body, is mortal. After death there is nothing till the Resurrection, when Christ comes to reward the faithful.

Biblical teaching is that man is mortal, not immortal, which he would have to be if we believe there is a spirit world.

Once-only once, we looked into each other's souls

It was a strange position; in a case where much ceremony is made about a marriage, surely a unique position, for bride and bridegroom to be thus alone together on the eve of their wedding-day, with but one short night between them and the beginning of a new life.

Under the circumstances in which those two were to be united, perhaps nothing could seem very strange. They had no thoughts, no fears, no joy; the man had no final vows to make, the woman no final tender prayers to say. All of their union was contained in the marriage contract that they had stemed contained in the marriage contact that they massigned.

And yet Dick, although he had no feeling at all for his bride, save a faint curiosity awakened by the fearless eccentricity of her behaviour, could not quite escape the strangeness of the situation. It gripped him; it filled him with an intense wonder as to what they two were going to make of life, and with an intense bitterness at the thought of what might have been. It filled him, too, with the soulblighting knowledge that what he was buying was dust and ashes, as far as he was concerned, and that he was simply sacrificing himself for his race. And over everything was spread, like a film, the atmosphere of mystery that the whole personality of Fay Swindover exhaled, like some faint perfume that haunted one's nostrils, but that one could-never recognise.

atmosphere of mystery that the whole personality of Fay Swindover exhaled, like some faint perfume that haunted one's nostrils, but that one could-never recognise.

The girl seemed totally unmoved. When she and Dick were alone in the room she left her post by the fireplace, where she had been standing like a statue ever since the signing of the document, and, crossing the room with her slow, deliberate step, took a cigarette from a big golden box and lighted it. Then she came back and sat down in a great high-backed chair.

The Spanish leather and the carved oak made her look wraith-like. One would not have been surprised to see her sink through the solid body of the chair and disappear. Contrary to her usual custom, she was magnificently dressed. The gown had voluminous skirts and a long train, and was fashioned of rose pink velvet embroidered in gold, and over the rich fabric were draped veils of chilfon, shading from deep sunset pink to a pearly grey, and giving the effect of an opalescent cloud. The whole was hemmed with a broad band of embossed gold embroidery. The bodice was cut very low, and there were no sleeves, but shoulder-straps of diamonds and floating draperies of chilfon veiled the upper part of the thin arms. On her neck she wore one of her father's wedding presents, a neck-lace of enormous rubies and diamonds, with great pear-shaped pendant drops, an overwhelmingly gorgeous ornament, that covered her throat and breast with such a fivery brilliance that it was almost tring to rest one's eyes upon it. Her hair was dressed as usual in a stiff, outstanding aureole, leaving the narrow, intellectual forehead exposed, and pinned up behind with a diamond comb in the shape of a crown. And on her finger shone the great engraved emerald that every Dangerville was bound by immemorial custom to place on the finger of his bride.

All this gorgeousness she had put on to please of the finger.

All this gorgeousness she had put on to please her father, who had read of the signing of marriage contracts between royal persons, of the gorgeous toilets and uniforms and the splendour of the surroundings, and had gone about for the last few days proclaiming in a loud voice that no union of crowned heads was of more importance than the marriage of his daughter and of his millions with the beggared heir of the proud house of Blanquart de Balliol.

crowled fleam was of more importance and the crowled fleam was of more importance and the the beggared heir of the proud house of Blanquart de Balliol.

So Fay, with a contemptuous smile, put thousands of-pounds' worth of jewels round her neck, but she could not and would not alter the frozen face above them, or the strange agate eyes, that had weighed everything in the balance and found the fairness of her youth and the wealth of the world worth nothing at all.

Dick Dangerville advanced towards her with a somewhat embarrassed mien. He presumed that her staying in the room meant that she had something to say to him. She had never sought his company before but none, when she had sent for him to tell him, with a faintly amused smile at the idea of her even pretending to consult anyone about her movements, that she was going to Germany for a time to stay with some friends to whom she wished personally to announce her marriage.

She had left the next day. Dick had seen her off at the station. Being a typical Englishman, and hating fuss of any kind, he had been slightly contemptuous of the following with which she travelled, and had felt something like a wild beast on show at a menagerie as the special steamed out of the station, and the crowd, followed him, openmouthed, into the street.

She had stayed away ten days, and on her return had sent for him again. "After that they had ridden once or wice together, and Fay had driven him in her automobile, and they had attended several tire-some functions given in their honour. And that was the sum total of their intercourse up to the ever of their wedding-day.

Dick had no fault to find with her. Her manner was perfect and she had been received with open arms, and responded immediately by establishing a most discriminating exclusiveness. Her social position was secured; everybody was only too eager to forget that she had a father. Everybody who had been invited was coming to the wedding tomorrow. They were very few; the cream of the county; a few of Dick's personal frie millionaire's roof as his guests. For once he would touch the limit of his strangely small ambition, small compared with what he had achieved, and yet vast as the wildest and lottiest dreams of men, because eternally out of his-grasp. For his daughter had not the power to make Swindover a social success, and, if she had had it, she would not have used it. He had long ago recognised this, and determined to reach his ambition through her. And her marriage was the first step towards its fulfilment.

As Dick came pearer to her chair, as she sat

As Dick came nearer to her chair, as she sat silent, with her eyes fixed on the fire, Fay made a little movement with her hand, indicating a chair opposite to hers.

"I am sure you are glad that all this fuss is over," said the young man in a hesitating voice. "I am afraid you are very tired."

"I am glad of this opportunity of speaking to you for a few moments," she replied. "To-morrow will be pandemonium, I feel sure. I want to say this—I mean, I want to be quite sure that you understand. After to-morrow, when my father and brother have left the castle, I want you to feel that it is absolutely yours. You will want to have all these monstrous restorations, or whatever my father calls them, pulled down, and your home made to look like itself again. And you will want to lead your own life. I do hope you understand how entirely your own your life will be. It may be idiotic and even impertinent of me to say so, but I feel, I have felt all the time, that perhaps you do hot quite understand. What I propose is this. We have successfully opposed all attempts to thrust, a honeymoon upon us through simply following the rule of your family that every Dangerville must-spend the first days of his married life in this place. IMPRESSIONISTIC ART BY CHILDREN.

These remarkable drawings are by children of from seven to twelve years of age. Under the instruction of Mr. T. W. Ablett, of the Royal School of Drawing, children are trained to draw from momentary observation. The first two pictures are by absolutely untaught childron, twelve years old, who were shown a bird flying. No. 3 is the work of a little girl of eleven, Miss Evelyn Hirst, and Nos. 4 and 5 are by Master Hubert Pelham Sworder, aged seven, after instruction by Mr. Ablett.

The Reading Age

What is the reading age? Figures from the chief librarian at Cambridge Free Library, quoted in "The Quiver," tend to show that the library appears "The Quiver," tend to show that the library appetite is most voracious between the ages of fourteen and thirty. Taking new borrowers for last year, we find that there were forty-three under fourteen years of age; 173 between fourteen and twenty; and 174 between twenty and thirty. From that age the reading capacity shows a remarkable diminution. There were only fifty-nine borrowers of between thirty and forty; twenty-seven between forty and fifty; fifteen between fifty and sixty; and fourteen over sixty.

Why Komura Prefers a Bowler.

Why Komura Profers a Bowler.

Baron Komura, who signed the peace treaty with Russia yesterday, prefers a bowler to a silk hat, to which he has an insuperable aversion, During his stay in America as a student he often visited New York City. As a Government-sent student it was proper that he should wear a frock-coat and a silk hat whenever he went out on the street. One day, wishing to have a Japanese dish, he went out to buy some meat. The butcher gave it to him in a paper package. As the Baron did not want to carry it in his hand on the street, he put it under the high hat on his head. Forth he went on Broadway toward his boarding-house, with an air of perfect unconcern; suddenly the wind rose and knocked the hat off his head, simultaneously causing the meat to be dropped on the sidewalk; to the great amusement of a young lady who was passing by.

Novel Cricket Match.

A curious cricket match is to be played on the historic green at Kew to-day. A Mr. Pring, who died many years ago, left a sum of money to be devoted to the encouragement of a love of cricket among the boys of the royal village. Prizes are given to the best batsman, bowler, and fielder.

Whisky Galore.

The quantity of whisky in warehouse in Scotland at the close of the last financial year was, says the "Glasgow Herald," 121,778,099 gallons, an increase during the past twelve months of 381,000 gallons, and of 11,750,000 gallons in five years. In English warehouses the stock had decreased by 630,000, and in Ireland the stocks were 1,500,000 gallons less than during the previous year. During the past ten years stocks in England have been increased by nearly 1,000,000 gallons, in Scotland the increase was 87 per cent. for the decade, and in Ireland they have been reduced by 500,000 gallons, with the net result that the total quantity in bond: in the United Kingdom is 165,000,000; ten years ago it was 108,000,000.

Welshman "by Extraction."

Welshman "by Extraction."

A good story of the veteran Lord Chancellor, who has just attained his eightieth birthday, is told by the "Grand Magazine." Before he became Solicitor-General he was the leader of the South Wales Circuit. He fought very strenuously a case on behalf of a Welsh public authority, and amused his bisteners by the ardour with which he identified himself with the local interests. "Come, come," interposed the Judge good-naturedly, "you must not argue too much in that strain. You cannot make yourself out to be a Welshman, you know." "Perhaps not," returned Mr. Hardinge Giffard, "but I have made a good deal of money out of Welshmen in my time." "Well, well," replied the Judge, "we may call you a Welshman by extraction."

What's in a Name."

What's in a Name."

Kensal Rise, which is up against Crossmen murders and trunk tragedies, is not the only place that has sought to change its name owing to the number of murders in the locality. Rugeley, the little town in Staffordshire where the famous Dr. Palmer murders were enacted, petitioned the then Prime Minister to have its name altered. The Premier of that time was Lord Palmerston, and he promised to grant their request if they would compliment him by adopting his name, calling it Palmers-town. But they didn't.

YOUR NERVES

Facts, Suggestions, and Advice for Those Who Are Run Down and Who > Feel Unequal to the Demands of Their Daily Duties.

Are your nerves right? Have you plenty of energy, go, and vigour? Or are you suffering from lack of nerve force and vitality? Do you find that you shrink from responsibility, or that you are wanting in pluck in difficult or trying situations? If so, your work and even your recreation is putting a heavy strain on you and robbing life of its brightness and pleasure. But it will not stop here. The strain on your nerves will at last become intolerable, and nervous breakdown is simply a matter of time.

HOW THE NERVES BECOME DISORDERED

Every moment in the day the body is being worn away, and at the same time it is being constantly renewed, and it is even said that the tissues, bones, muscles, and organs are completely renewed once in every seven years. Physical exertion wears the muscles away, and worry, anxiety, study, and the strain of business life wear away brain and nerve tissue. Obviously, both muscular and nerve tissue needs to be restored by rest and food as fast as it is worn away, and if you are thoroughly healthy and not overworked this goes on automatically. In many cases, however, the exertion, either of body or brain, is too intense or too prolonged, and the result is that the wearing away process goes on faster than that of replacement. Physical or mental breakdown consequently ensues. This is the simple explanation of the way in which the nervous or mutscular system gets out of order, and it is our object here to explain the method by which the nervous collapse prevented. Every moment in the day the body is being worn worry and a nuis-ance. Probably you cannot even sleep properly at night, and when you rise in the morning you feel just as tired as you did the night before, and you would give any-thing to feel fresh, energetic, and vigorous again. There is really energetic, and vigorous again. There is really only one way you can do this, and that is by rebuilding your worn-away nerve tissue. Stimulants will not help you, but make you worse and nervous breakdown more certain, and general tonics will not help you because they will not renew the lost nerve tissue.

REBUILD YOUR NERVOUS SYSTEM

REBUILD YOUR NERVOUS SYSTEM

This is the keynote to successful treatment of all nervous troubles. If your nervous system is thoroughly restored and once again made healthy and vigorous, the clouds of mental depression will lift and you will feel ready and eager for work and recreation. Bishop's Tonules have been prepared for this very purpose. They embody the special elements worn away under mental strain, so that it is obvious they will do for you just what you want. Bishop's Tonules do two things. First, they supply new matter to replace that which has been worn out, and, second, they assist the nerves and brain to assimilate the necessary nutriment from the ordinary food and drink. That is why they cure and why those who have used them praise them so enthusiantically.

Miss M. Hall writes:—"I send you this note to let you know how much I esteem Bishop's

Miss M. Hall writes:—"I send you this note to let you know how much I esteem Bishop's Tonules. I do not as a rule go in for advertised medicines, but knowing that your preparations are prescribed by physicians of the very highest calibre I tried Bishop's Tonules for neurasthenia of a very pronounced character, and they have done me an enormous amount of good."

COMMENCE THE TREATMENT TO-DAY

There is an old proverb that "Procrastination is the thief of time," but it is the thief of many other things besides time. Procrastination robs men and women of money, comfort, and health, and there are few matters in regard to which delay is so dangerous as in questions of health. "To-morrow will do" lays thousands on a sick-bed every year, and many complaints which fasten themselves on sufferers for life might have been avoided by a few days' or weeks' treatment when they first showed themselves. If your nerves are out of order, do not wait till to-morrow. Get your supply of Bishop's Tonules now, and commence the treatment at once. Another day's delay means a day's more discomfort and a day longer for the nerve-wearing process to continue.

THE PARTRIDGE SEASON—RECIPES FOR COOKING THE SUCCULENT BIRD.

GAME IN THE LARDER.

SEPTEMBER PROVENDER AND NEW WAYS OF SERVING IT.

Another game item is now added to the poulterer's bill of fare, namely, the partridge.

Many epicures declare that, like grouse, it is at its best when served plainly roasted with its correct accompaniment of bread sauce, good gravy, and fried crumbs; but as this method is so well-known let us discourse concerning recipes more elaborate

SALMIS OF PARTRIDGE A L'ANCIENNE

INGREDIENTS:—Two partridges, half a pint of brown stock, two small onions, two strips of lemon-peel, four large tablespoonfuls of brown sauce, half a glass of claret or port, two cloves, pepper and salt, croutons of bread.

three rows each on the breasts. Half roast them, taking great care that they are only partially

When cold cut them in neat joints and remove the skin. Peel the onions and stick the cloves in them. Lay the partridge in a stewpan or casserole, add the stock, sauce, lemon-peel, and shallots.

Gover the pan and let the contents simmer very gently till the gravy is reduced to about one-third. Whilst this is being done put all the trimmings strom the birds with a spoonful of stock in a mortar and pound as finely as possible. Next rub through a fine sieve. Add the purfer thus made to the other ingredients in the pan.

When cooked arrange the pieces of bird neatly in the centre of a hot dish. Add the claret and seasoning to the sauce, boil it up quickly, and strain it over the partridge. Arrange the croutons round the edge and serve very hot.

PARTRIDGE SALAD A LA RUSSE. INGREDIENTS:—Three partridges cooked, one pint and a-half of aspic jelly, half a pint of good brown sauce, one gill and a half of mayonnaise, one gill of cream, one ounce of glaze, one glass of sherry, two tablespoonfuls of bottled peas, one tablespoonful of shredded cucumber, one lettuce, two tomatoes, stick of celery, seasoning.

Coat a plain border mould with aspic jelly. Cut the birds in neat pieces and remove the skin. Warm the sauce with the glaze, wine, and half a pint the sauce with the glaze, wine, and half a pint of the aspic. Strain the sauce and mask each piece of bird with it completely. When this has set, pour over a little plain aspic to give a glazed appearance. Mix the mayonnaise with the rest of the aspic, which must be only warm, not hot. Add the peas, cucumber, and the cream slightly whipped. Season this carefully. Pour this mixture into the mould and let it set. When cold, turn it out on to a pretty dish. Arrange the pieces of partridge tastefully in the centre, putting round a border of carefully-washed lettuce, heaps of shredded celery, and quarters of tomatoes. Serve it as cold as possible.

GATEAU OF PARTRIDGE

INGREDINTS:—Three-queriers of a pound of any cold remains of partridge, two ounces of lean cooked-ham or bacon, one small onion and carrot, three tomatoes (small), sprig of parsley, one and a half pints of stock, three-quarters of an ounce of sheet gelatine, two hard-boiled eggs, truffic (if convenient), salt, pepper, nutmeg.

Remove the bones and skin of the partridge. Put these trimmings with the stock, bacon, sliced vege-tables, and parsley in a stewpan. Simmer them for about three-quarters of an hour. Strain off this stock and season it rather highly.

Let it cool and remove all grease. Dissolve the gelatine in a little water, and add it, also a little glaze or caramel if the colour seems too pale.

Coat a plain mould with this mixture, decorating it with hard-boiled egg and truffle, setting these decorations with more of the jelly sauce. Cut the flesh of the birds in neat but not too small dice. Mix it with the egg cut in a similar manner, and pack it into the mould, but not too tightly.

Pour in as much of the jellied stock as the mould will hold. When cold, turn it out and serve it with chopped aspic round or salad.

ALL THAT A MAN HATH.

"I know exactly what you mean," said the girl, "but your 'bargain is made with me, and if absolve you, from all its conditions, or any of them, that's my affair."

BLACK ARROW'S CHARACTER REDEEMED.

Mr. W. Hall-Walker's Two-Year-Old Easily Wins Breeders' Stakes at Derby.

SELECTIONS FOR TO-DAY.

DERBY, Tuesday Night.—Fine weather and fine sport were experienced at Derby to-day, and visitors to the meeting had every cause to be on good terms with themselves. Several of the winners were well backed, and in only one instance was the "talent" really astray.

Until a day or twaga Stealaway and Gay Gordon wate stable companions, but the latter having tired out the day of the stable companions, but the latter having tired out of the stable companions, but the latter having tired out the stable companions, but the latter having tired out the stable stab of correctly placing the first three.

After the decision of the Chaddesden Plate there was rush to see Black Arrow put to rights for the Breeders' roal Stakes. The colt stripped a perfect picture, and on ooks alone stripped a perfect picture, and on the plate of the property o

Robinson dul not fear a reptition of the Goodwood finsco, but he had taken the precaution to give the beautiful son of Count Schombists of the barrier, and the cold showed not the slightest trace of temper. When they assembled at the post he was perfectly quiet, and it was evident that the disciplinary measures adopted with him during the past few weeks was not labour in vain. He got off well, and it was only of the pourney.

When H. Jones asked him to win his race Black Arrow was out by hinself in a twinkling, and he cantered home the easiest of winners by three lengths. It was a great performance, and now that he has re-established himself in the affections of the racing public he will become a very hot favourite for next year's classic events. There is no telling how good he is, and he stands out by himself amongst this season's juveniles, as Previous and the season's juveniles, as Previous and the season's properties of the season's properties and with all due respect to Lally's abilities. It is expected that Black Arrow will be sent on to Kempton on Saturday, and it is to be hoped that Lally will also put in an appearance. According to the conditions of the race, Lally has to concede Black Arrow will, a task hopelessly beyond the capabilities of the Netheravon youngster.

The well-backed Sal took the Friary Nursery, Mr. Stedall having no better luck with L'Exception filly than with Leopold. Sal will be better remembered as the Waima filly, who has shown pretry useful form in the plating class. Quinade slipped on her head when the backer went up, and whatever chance she may have posteried was instantly neutroped.

barrier went up, and whatever chance she may have possessed was instantly destroyed.

Ardeer is showing remarkable improvement in his old age, and he followed up his Garwick success by taking the Shipley Hall Selling Plate. Apparently this second with the shipley Hall Selling Plate. Apparently this second able to buy him in for 170 guineas, or 50 guineas less than he had to go to on Friday to retain him.

A closer finish than that seen for the Portland Plate could hardly be imagined. It was almost a deadhest behind Dispute and Bonnie Earl, who were inseparable upon passing the post. It was a wonderful struggle, and excitement was at fever-hear as the trio flashed past the post. As no diviolate over the post of the po

CENTURIES AT THE OVAL.

Huge Score by Llewellyn-' W. G.' in Form at Bournemouth.

The Surrey batsmen made very light of the Leicester attack yesterday at the Oval. Hayward began well, and was soon on the way towards his century. In the end he rattled up 192.

Leicester were even then not out of the wood, as Lord Dalmeny and young J. N. Crawford set about the bowling with such refreshing vigour that there was no stopping them. Both exceeded the century, and when eventually the innings was declared closed, at 549 for six wickets, Lord Dalmeny had made 138 and Crawford was 142, not out. * * *

Leicester had a little batting overnight, but no disaster befell them, and at the close of play they had made 24 without losing a wicket.

The Australians did much better against Essex, at Leyton, and appear to have the game well in hand. Darling made 61, Noble a breezy 50, and Howell lashed out in splendid style, hitting the bowling all over the field. The Saex men badly missed the lowling of Receives, whose injured hand kept him out of the field.

SCOTLAND'S RECOVERY.

Uphill Golf by Braid and Herd-Five of Twelve Lost Holes Rubbed Off.

It is something to have sufficient virtue to be grateful It is sometining to nave sumerical virtle to be grateful for small mercies; and Scotsmen would appear to be bountifully supplied in this way. They were all very pleased with the turn things took yesterday, for Braid and Herd got off five holes of the Englishmen's lead, and for Saturday's stage at Deal J. H. Taylor and Harry Vardon will start seven up, which, after all, is immensely less than trailed. less than twelve.

less than twelve.

With yesterday's golf at St. Ahne's I was not, so impressed. Its excellence was intermittent, and fortune fluctuated according to the mistakes made by the great masters. And these were neither small nor few.

I do not wish to infer that yesterday the great arts of the game had not plenty of demonstration. Some of the long putts got down, particularly by Herd, out-Travised Travis, and J. H. Taylor made some miraculous recoveries from difficulties created by his illustrious partner from the tree. from the tee.

coveries from discoulies created by his illustroos partner from the tee.

Neither Braid nor Vardon was consistently at the top of his game; but Alex. Herd seemed to be wholly rid of the handicap which a strained knee had inflicted on him at Troon. His putting was superb, and he was strong through the green. He excelled particularly in the last eighteen holes of the day, and his reluvenseence spelt the partial recovery of the Scotumen.

The way that the game went in the early play in the morning looked had for Scotland, for England at one to II, and in the second round the Scotumen again did well, and finished on the day's play 5 holes up.

To what can I attribute the in-and-out play? I scarcely like to say. The weather, which began with a drintle going was heavy through the green; but the ball cut through trally when it came to putting. I am hoping to see the men at their best next. Saturday.

AMATEUR FOOTBALL.

Public Schools and Their Influence -Corinthians Return to Queen's Club.

Everyone must be impressed by the immensity of the ublic interest in professional football and by the good a many ways that its development has done in conserving the physical qualities of the race. I am among the interest in appreciating its blessings, mere the professor way to the cooling of the professor way soul is till very much with the young men who play the game ledy for recreation's great sake.

I would che my old menty desire. "We want I would che my old menty of the control of the word of Khonaird in his now amous sporting classic delivered at the Church Congressom years ago. And if Lord Kinnaird in his broad-mindedness can hake the presidency of the Football Associations had also the presidency of the Football Associations have asson for the actinous which so many members of the ouncil throw into their attitude when anything affecting the public schools crops up at the board.

Play for Recreation.

We all know that the average anateur side is rather small beer by comparison with the finely-trained bands run by the big professional syndicates. But its members do their best according to their lights; and, after all, it should not be forgotten that their football is their recreation. And all honour to them in their contentment. By themselves. Their football, when the men are in full Cry, possesses a verve that rarely shows itself in any professional team. It is not completely isolated though for themselves, and I have an idea that the usual half between the completely included the sum of the completely and the first that the game is compulsory and the first that the game is compulsory particularly at Charterhouse. Many of the greatest players of our times learned the rudinents of football on the Godalming heights.
